Trauma as an Acquired Disorder of Sensation, Arousal and Regulation: A Psychosensory Approach: Part 2

This two-part case-based series examines the claim that aspects and features of trauma disorders have symptom characteristics similar to sensory processing disorders suggesting that trauma disorders could be understood in part as acquired disorders of sensation, arousal and regulation.

Part II focuses on application of sensory-based interventions for trauma treatment and play therapy for trauma through a psychosensory lens. Sensory-based interventions that can be implemented with occupational therapy support in mental health settings will be explored and specific aspects of play therapy for trauma, including turning passive to active and incorporation of body-based techniques will be highlighted. The impact of trauma on the inner life, aspects of CPP applicable to a psychosensory approach and case material will punctuate the session.

Webinar time: 1pm-2:30pm EDT

LMHCs, LMSWs, LCSWs who attend this webinar will be eligible to receive 1.5 CEU contact hours through the NYU Silver School of Social Work.

CEU Requirements:
